

After Care for Cosmetic Tattooing - EYELINER

This is your investment! Care for it well. After care is key to a great healed result

Day One: Gently dab/wipe the area with dampened cotton pads (you will be given a pack to get you started), this is most important in the first few hours, do it every 20 mins for the first few hours and then hourly for the rest of the day if need be. Make sure to squeeze them out so they are only damp. This is to remove lymph (clear fluid that appears on a wound) as if this settles, it will cause excess scabbing. These pads can be put in the fridge or freezer to help soothe area and reduce swelling. Eyes don't seem to produce as much lymph as brows so you don't have to be super thorough. You may also take an antihistamine or some pain relief to help with any swelling. Sleeping slightly more upright will also help.

Day Two: Any swelling should subside within 24 hours. The eyeliner will be looking slightly darker as the pigment on the skin oxidises. You can continue with your damp pads before applying your balm (Please rather than wiping, just dab over them, this just helps to keep the area clean) You can apply your first application of aftercare balm after 24hours. Only a tiny bit is needed (less than a grain of rice per brow per application) Do this morning and night, using a clean cotton tip.

Day 3-10: Keep dabbing morning and night before applying balm. Hygiene is important. At anywhere from day 3-5 the flaking will start (everyone is different), this is a normal part of the healing process, you will have to be gentle when applying the balm. The area may be itchy, do not pick or scratch as this will pull pigment!! Apply aftercare balm until any flaking has stopped (usually 5-7 days)

AVOID:

- Getting your tattoo wet. Keep dry apart from the damp pads
- Sweating. Sweat will dilute the pigment in the skin. Saline tattoo removal is using salt and water to remove tattoo pigment, this is the same effect as sweating! This is not as important as brows.
- Hot baths, saunas, hot pools, swimming
- Sun tanning, it is so important to protect your tattoo, wear a hat and glasses. The sun will fade your tattoo faster than anything even once healed.
- Laser treatments or chemical peels, once healed the area should be avoided (usually is avoided anyway)
- AHA and retinol creams/serums/eye creams on the area. Once healed these can be used but avoid the area
- Smoking and excess alcohol can slow the healing process
- Vaseline and any other petroleum based products, if you run out of balm use kawakawa or coconut oil
- Makeup on the area
- Using eye drops until healed. These will cause the pigment to fade

- Lash growth serums until healed although keep in mind this will need to be stopped again 2 weeks prior to your touch up session

Keep area clean, a clean pillow case is advised. If wearing makeup, carefully apply around the area and remove with face wipe.

What to expect: Until healed (around 5-7 days, 10 days maximum) the colour will look stronger. It will soften about 30/50%. Pigment can sometimes disappear only to resurface again over the next few weeks, gradually darkening as it settles into the dermis. The flaking is normal from day 3-10 and can look patchy. Do not panic! It's all worth it. Let the flaking come away naturally. This is why the touch up is key to perfect your cosmetic tattoo. Flaking will be different for each individual, dependant on the option chosen, skin type and aftercare. Please do not freak out if they start flaking later than what's stated. Slight swelling and/or redness may be noticed for a few days. The skin around the area can also look slightly pink for a while as it is new skin.
